9. Write the substance of the following passage : 5

All desire success. But of those who make the attempt very few gain success. The truth is that it is neither very easy nor utterly impossible to win success. Success depends on the possession of certain qualities, the most important of which is will-power or firm determination. The reason why most people fail is that they do not possess the necessary strength of will. Consequently they are frightened away by the initial difficulties and give up the attempt altogether in despair. But the man who has will-power grapples with the difficulties and is able to overcome them. He does his utmost to find some way of overcoming these difficulties and usually succeeds in finding one so that he gains desired object in the end.
